Emotion Review is a new quarterly journal published by SAGE Publications with the first issue to appear in January 2009.

Its unique aim will be to publish theoretical, conceptual, and review papers—often with commentaries—to advance the field of emotion theory and research.

Emotion Review invites articles from the entire international community. The Review will publish work across a wide field of research that traverses many disciplines. The Review will be open to publishing work in anthropology, biology, computer science, economics, history, humanities, linguistics, neuroscience, philosophy, physiology, political science, psychiatry, psychology, sociology, and in other areas where emotion research is active.

Forthcoming Special Issues

- The Embodiment of Emotion
- The Philosophy of Robert Solomon
- The History of Emotion Theory
- The Phenomenology of Conscious Emotional Experience

Target Articles

- The Social Sharing of Emotion
- What Are Basic Emotions?
